Dali Rivera is a harassment awareness & prevention educator for parents, schools, and businesses. While she mostly works with parents of children in 3rd to 8th grades, she also works with business and entrepreneurs to provide education on workplace harassment.

She is the owner of DaliTalks, L.L.C. and the creator of the Diversity & Anti-Bullying Academy (#DABA), a program of a series of online mini-courses and workshops.

Dali is a U.S. Army veteran, speaker, parent to two teen girls, and wife of a U.S. Army veteran. Dali earned a master’s degree in Women & Gender Studies from Towson University in Towson, Maryland.

Her passion to stop harassment comes from her own personal experiences as a bullied child and from having become an advocate for children who experienced harassment, to include her own. She has dedicated herself to share information regarding harassment awareness and prevention as well as many other related parenting topics to help families thrive, and promote equality in their own communities.
